MISS STIRLING AND MISS CAVERLY TO PLAY FOR TITLE

Win Their Way to Final Round in Women's National Golf Championship.

ATLANTA GIRL BEATS MRS. AUCHINCLOSS 2 UP

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 6 .- Two young omen who play the game as it should be played reached the final round of the sen's national golf championship on the links of the Belmont Spring Country Club to-day when Miss Mildred Caverly of the Philadelphia Cricket Club and Migs Alexa W. Stirling of the Atlanta Athletic Association were the victors in the two semi-final matches.

Miss Caverly, 23 years of age, beat Mrs. Thomas Hucknall of the Forest Hill Field Club in a runaway match by 7 up and 6 to play, and Miss Stirling. who is just 19, after playing the bes self of the tourney, going out and piling up a lead of four holes on Mrs. C. C. Auchineless of the Piping Rock Club, was carried to the home green in a thrillmg struggle and won by only 2 up.

executive committee of the United States gratulated as heartily as the little Golf Association, took a hand in the game on the fourth, and nearly every one thought that he slipped for once. When Mrs. Auchincloss reached her ball after her second shot she found it almost hidden in a pile of leaves made by a couple of workmen standing near by who had been endeavoring to sweep off the fair way. Oddly enough Miss Stirling's ball was in a smaller pile on the other side of the course, but which had evidently been made by the wind and not by the two sweepers. Mrs. Auchincloss wanted two holes by better work on the greens. Mr. Crosby, who was in charge of the match, ruled against her and she had to play the ball from where it was. The shet fell short of the green and Miss Stirling won the hole in 5 to 6, becoming 2 up. She had to hole another four foot putt to do it, however.

ereased her lead to 3 up. As has been her rather undestrable custom all through the tourney, she sliced her drive into a trap on the sixth and lost the hole when Mrs. Auchincloss holed a twelve feet putt for a 4. Pown the hill to the seventh Miss

Stirling played perfect golf, while Mrs. Auchineless dubbed along and had played her fifth shot and missed the cup before Mise Stirling was called upon to putt for her 4. The victory made the little Southerner 3 up again and she increased

After the ninth had been halved in 5 the two contestants and Mr. Crosby held a colloquy on the green which mystified the gallery. It transpired later that on the eighting green Mrs. Auchincloss had outted the two balls, which lay touching each other and Miss Stirling, who was sway, lifted her opponent's ball before putting. Under the rules she had no right to do so, but should have waited for Mrs. Auchincloss to pick up her own ball. Realizing that fact, the little Southern girl spoke to Mr. Crosby held won the hole if she cared to claim it.

Auchincless proved herself as cool and courageous as any woman who ever trod the links by her magnificent struggle for victory on the inward nine.

Up to to-day the little six has been a bugbear to Miss Stirling, but she had to play it well to-day and she did. Mrs. Auchineless, playing first, put her ball on the green fifteen feet from the pin, but Miss Stirling's was a foot or two closer. The hole was halved in 3, after each had made a good try for a 2.

Then came the seventeenth, which really decided the eutcome and kept three minutes behind.

There was a stiff wind blowing when play began this morning and no one expected to see any really good scoring. They reckoned without little Miss Stirling, however, for the biggest gallery of the tourney saw her go out in 33 against Mrs. Auchincloss, and although the difficult first nine made under such trying conditions completely overshadowed even the golf played by Mrs. W. A Gavin earlier in the week.

Miss Stirling lost no time in taking the lead. She won the first hole by running down a five foot putt for a 4, after being outplayed up to that moment. Mrs. Auchincloss missed a short one and was 1 down. She never got back on level terms.

Only another good putt, this time an eight footer, saved Miss Stirling on the second hole, but she made the short with confidence and got a half in 4. Up the hill to the third Miss Stirling again made up for a poor second shot by holing a difficult putt, and as Mrs. Auchincloss, after reaching the green with her second, took three putts, the hole was halved in 5.
